Machine Tool Design and Maintenance and .Education (20th century) Educating in the 20th century is a general process of educating, which normally requires a system of organized instruction from a teacher, to impart a certain knowledge, ability or skill to one or more students. Structure Classical education In the 20th century, most forms of formal education were based on a tradition of classical education, established in antiquity, which can be traced to the writings of the ancient Greek philosopher Plato. The earliest formal education, including that of Plato himself, was said to date from the beginning of civilization when Socrates taught youth in Athens. In more recent times, the earliest evidence of a formal education system, outside of China, is known from Mesopotamia. Government schools In the modern era, the government (or state) is often charged with providing most forms of formal education. The government was therefore involved in the early development of most educational systems. The first formalized system of education in the modern era was provided by the English government under the auspices of the Board of Education under the "old" system of education. The Board of Education was abolished in 1944 and its responsibilities transferred to the Ministry of Education, and later to the Department for Education and Science. Jawaharlal Nehru, prime minister of India from 1947 until his death in 1964, implemented the Indian State's first educational system, the Jawaharlal Nehru National Academy for Excellence in Science and Technology, for India's underprivileged. The establishment of new government schools in different countries followed, such as in India where the Universities Grants Commission, (UGC) in 1952, the Central Board of Secondary Education, (CBSE), in 1962, and the Higher Education Commission of Pakistan in 1976, or in the former Yugoslavia, where the educational system was gradually centralized with the founding of the Yugoslav Academy of Sciences and Arts in 1946. Other systems The Russian system was founded by Vladimir L. Vernadsky in 1911 and is still in operation. Methods Classical education With the advent of Plato's pupil Aristotle as a teacher and systematizer, the idea that education of humans should be both formal (formal instruction was formal education) and effective was replaced by a new idea of
