The dissent, relying on Dyer , ultimately argues that the parole board’s decision to deny Dewitt good conduct time should not be set aside where “at all times, the Parole Board has had the power to reduce [Dewitt’s] sentence,” so that while the decision may have been wrongly made, it “is not void and may not be challenged collaterally.” Although we do not disagree with this statement of law, we do not think it necessarily applies to the situation before us. Because Dewitt was indigent, the district court did not order a record of the parole hearing to be prepared and forwarded to the county court, and thus the record is not developed before us. Moreover, the record before us does not demonstrate that Dewitt was denied the opportunity to be heard. The district court decided Dewitt’s case without hearing oral argument, holding Dewitt to a strict pleading standard which he did not meet. [¶29] The judgment is affirmed. [¶30] Gerald W. Neumann Phototoxic effects of 5-amino-4-pyrazolone in various plant cell suspension cultures and prokaryotic cells. The effects of 5-amino-4-pyrazolone (5-AP) on three plant cell suspension cultures and three prokaryotic systems have been examined. 3,5-Diphenyl-2-pyrazoline (DPP), a potent photosensitizer, was also used as a standard. All systems have some common characteristics: a low pH. Relatively high light intensity (200 - 500 microE m(-2) s(-1)) and a closed system. The growth of the prokaryotic cell cultures could be completely
