Chapter 1 Prologue The World Between: An Infernal Realm of Human Thought "Hello. How may I help you?" This is the voice of the "Master of Souls" who resides at the center of the world that connects everything. I have come from far beyond the Land Between, and I have lost my way. Can you help me? "Can you tell me the way to the village where I was born?" "The village where you were born is not within this world. Go to the village where your soul once existed. Although you have lost your way, it is where your soul once belonged." The voice sounded as if it were about to disappear, and yet the voice continued. "Do not despair. You will find the way again. Not only in this world, but in all worlds. Even if you are lost, your soul is eternal. Your search for the Elden Ring will continue even in the underworld. Even if you should not return to this world, you can play a role in the world of souls in a different world, and while time passes, the problems of this world will not change." While it was difficult to perceive the voice's origin, I walked toward a faraway mountain in search of a way home. The feeling of despair was numbing my thoughts. In that place, a mysterious voice called out. "What do you want?" I called out to it. "I want to hear your voice again." In response, the voice sighed. "You are going far. Even if you find a way home, it is very far away. I understand. I will tell you what to do. Listen to what I tell you, and it will be fine. The desire to find your way back to the world of souls will be strong, but it will not be easy. Can you hear me?" "I hear you." "Do not be scared. I will not let you lose your way." The wind swept through me, as if the voice of an elder god had become one of the concepts I held in my mind. "What I am telling you is the story of your life. Listen to it carefully. Do not forget this even after you return to the world of souls." I now felt a strong urge to listen, and a nugget of understanding awakened within me.

If, under the Department's established policy, the interviews "detect[ed] no reason to deny LCA[s]" and "[t]here is no reason to deny eligibility based on the reasons given by [Villalobos]" or "imputed income," then this anomaly cannot be attributed to an erroneous interpretation of the regulation. The Department and Villalobos dispute whether the error was in the regulatory interpretation or in applying it. This is an issue we are not equipped to resolve. Instead of addressing the propriety of the Department's approach, however, we are called upon to decide whether the agency's error was harmless. See Auer, 519 U.S. at 462. Having considered the record as a whole, we conclude that it is more likely than not that the agency's error was harmless. Although the incorrect interpretation of the eligibility requirement for LCA was based on the regulation's plain language and thus "differs in kind from a legal misunderstanding," we need not close our eyes to the reality that respondents "embrac[ed] the erroneous rule in good faith," id., but "even so, it is appropriate to invoke the harmless-error rule."
